Alison has had a lead role for cycling within Clackmannanshire as part of her Active Schools role since 2001. She took on the Bikeability Scotland Coordinator role in 2018. Alison works with her team of coordinators to deliver CTA courses to school staff, parents and volunteers and enjoys this aspect of the role very much. Alison is qualified as a Cycle Trainer and Cycle Trainer+.

Earliest memory of cycling?

My dad pushing me down the hill outside the house and me not falling off! A big surprise to us both!

What would you say to a school thinking about participating in Bikeability Scotland?

Bikeability Scotland training for pupils is an essential life skill and can enhance their confidence and resilience levels immensely. Schools in Clackmannanshire are fully engaged in the programme and agree that the training is a vital part of the wider school programme and engages the children and teachers alike.

Best Bikeability Scotland moment?

Seeing a girl from one of our schools progress from refusing to take her feet off the ground to pedalling around the playground with a smile on her face within 2 hours of support. Such a delight!

Most likely to be heard saying....

"Lift your feet and relax your hands on the grips."
