Campbell has been Midlothian Council's Bikeability Scotland Coordinator since 2018. His favourite aspect of the job is getting out of the office and meeting school staff, volunteers and other coordinators. He enjoys working together with everyone to meet the same goal of growing and promoting the Bikeability Scotland programme, and is qualified as a Cycle Trainer and Emergency First Aider.

Earliest memory of cycling?

Cycling my first bike to the local park every day of the school summer holidays to meet up with my friends. Then taking the long way home through the cycle paths in the woods.

What would you say to a school thinking about participating in Bikeability Scotland?

Get signed up! The pupils benefit so much from being involved in the Bikeability Scotland programme. They are able to learn a skill that will last a lifetime and help with their transport now and later in life. It is also great for the teachers being able to get some "out of class time" and have some fun in the sun (probably rain being in Scotland). It is not an opportunity that you want to miss as getting the children on bikes can aid significantly in reducing busy school morning traffic with pupils cycling to school.

Best Bikeability Scotland moment?

Being able to get a school within the authority that had never completed Bikeability Scotland training, and were reluctant to do so, signed up to deliver in 2018. By offering support and highlighting the benefits that the training will bring it resulted in the school wanting to take part and this year are already signed up!

Most likely to be heard saying....

"Always remember your hand signals.
They're looking great. Keep it up!"
